

SAILED AROUND NEW DEFENDER

Reliance No Match for Columbia In Boat to Windward With Light Breeze.

(By Associated Press.)
COLUMBIA, L. I., May 5.—It required just twenty minutes for the performer to defeat Columbia, to demonstrate to-day that in a light wind and beating to windward, she is a better boat than the new Hershoff cup yacht Reliance.
Starting from a position to leeward, Columbia sailed through the new boat's boat's lee, lapped across her bow, and in the next leg of a mile and a half increased her lead to nearly a quarter of a mile. Reliance then withdrew. When Columbia went through her lee, Reliance kept on, and voluntarily gave up the advantage of her windward position, but she was none the less decisively out-sailed. This was the first brush between the rivals.
It was clear that despite her greater sail area Reliance was outclassed by Columbia in the light winds that prevailed. She stood up too stiffly, while Columbia went down to her sailing lines.

the law, so as to enable an applicant to obtain license.

Third, That it is to the interest, the best and highest interest of the community to have this law enforced. The writer does not believe that the bill is going to be a success. He does not believe that it will advance the cause of temperance, but at the same time he is aware that many other good men, who are not willing to see the experiment fairly and honestly tested. Again, the best way to kill a bad law, is to enforce it. Take the illustration of the town of Holland. If liquor is to be sold there, let the community will be peculiarly interested in not having it sold at other places within the county, and the very fact that they have a license obtained against the law may cause that community to be more watchful in the future, and the would also cause honest temperance men in other parts of the county to unite with the saloon people in an effort to correct the wrong.

Unless this law is to be enforced, the agitation of this subject is to be kept from year to year. It may be that now and then a party may get an office by its agitation, and that it is to the interest of some people to keep up the agitation indefinitely, but no right-thinking man who takes a broad view of the situation can see any good in the agitation of this question. These contests in court tend to stir up strife in the community and accomplish no good purpose except to get the views of a particular man.
So far, no definite principles have been laid down by any courts by which any party will be able to obtain license or not. In some counties for a year or two the judge will take one view of the liquor question, and after a while the same judge will take another view. Different county judges will hold the most conflicting views. It was supposed that when this Mann bill was passed that the judges would grant liquor licenses in towns and at other places mentioned in the bill, and that outside of those places the bill would apply in full force that no license would be granted; that no judge would say that he was not in favor of it, but that it was not his duty to grant it, and that the judge or the liquor was not sold.

The writer is not unfamiliar with prior statutes on this subject and was the decision of our highest court on this subject, and he cannot see how any judge in a country place can enter of record that he is fully satisfied that the applicant has measured up to the law. There can be no question about that fact that the object of the law was to reduce the number of saloons in the State. It is true that one very serious objection to the bill is that it was not properly drawn.
It should read that no license should be granted outside of certain places named in the bill, that being the plain meaning of it. It is true that the advocate of temperance under this new law is forced to admit that the law is a firm belief in the proposition that men cannot be made morally better by law. If, however, the Legislature of Virginia, representing the people, shall take a different view of the matter, and in a new law object of which is to promote the morals of the community, then it is earnestly urged that it will be best to give the law a fair trial by having it honestly and strictly executed every.

Knoxville, Tenn.

From a small but most enthusiastic band of fifteen to a membership of nearly seven hundred in nine years, in brief the record of Post "C," Tennessee Division, at Knoxville. This little band to which the Post owes its birth and present healthful growth, put the same real energy and persistence into their work that the many brave and loyal souls who fought on both sides during the Civil War. And the name Volunteer State was well earned by the willingness and eagerness with which the men of this district to fight and die for the cause they thought just and righteous. At the end of all their returned with sad but resolute hearts, and to this day every good principle, unlimited energy and tireless effort have been given towards the upbuilding and extension of all branches of honest trade and everything that leads to commercial success. Of such a lineage and of such stock is the Post Tennessee
